HAUPTMANN PLEADS NOT GUILTY; BAIL PUT AT $100,000

Arraigned in Bronx County Court On Indictment Charging Extortion

IS FACED BY "LINDY"

Solicit Aid of Berlin Police in Solving the German Angle

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, the Lindbergh case suspect, was arraigned in the Bronx County court today on an indictment charging extortion. He pleaded "not guilty," and his bail was fixed at $100,000.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the kidnapped and murdered baby, confronted Hauptmann this morning, shortly before the prisoner was arraigned, it was stated by district attorney Samuel J. Foley.

Hauptmann looked weary, and needed a shave, when he was brought into the court room to be arraigned before county judge Lester W. Patterson. The kidnapping suspect wore the same gray suit he had on when arrested. His white shirt was open at the throat, and he wore no tie.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—The services of the vaunted hunt-hunting system of Berlin police were enlisted in the Lindbergh case today.

Arthur Johnson, the New York detective, assigned to investigate the German angle of the mystery, following the arrest of Bruno Hauptmann, appeared at the headquarters of the Berlin C. I. D., and was introduced to Otto Trettin, one-eyed terror of the Berlin underworld.

Trettin promptly assigned one of his crack detectives to aid Johnson in tracking down the German angle, and requested the International News Service to act as interpreter. Johnson feared his inadequate command of German would handicap him.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 27.—The finding of a 25-calibre German automatic pistol in Bruno Hauptmann's garage in New York, was regarded with increasing significance today, when Dr. Charles H. Mitchell, Mercer County physician, indicated his belief that the hole found in the kidnapped baby's skull probably was caused by a bullet.

Dr. Mitchell, who performed the autopsy shortly after the baby's body was found, flatly rejected the theory of Major Charles R. Schoeffel, deputy superintendent of the New Jersey state police, that the child's skull had been punctured by a stick. "That is the first I ever heard of it," he said, "and I can say that it would have been impossible."

FARMER GETS LIFE SENTENCE FOR MURDER

Alex Legat, 55, Enters Plea of Guilty Before The Court

OCCURRED LAST JUNE

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 27.—His face twitching with nervousness, Alex Legat, 55, Springfield township, who pleaded guilty last week to a charge of murdering Paul Kulscar, 60, a neighbor, was sentenced yesterday by President Judge Hiram H. Keller to serve the balance of his life in the Eastern State Penitentiary, after being declared guilty of murder in the first degree.

The fatal shooting took place on the night of June 21 on the Springfield township farm where Kulscar and Legat owned adjoining tracts. They had been fighting for twelve years over the water rights that separated their properties. Legat testified that Kulscar had treated him so mean over a period of years, in regards to water rights, that it worked on his mind.

On the night of June 21, Legat came home from a day's work in the fields, and found Kulscar digging, he said, in the spring to change the water course. He said that he had frequently warned him, and that he walked into his house, got a shot gun and fired.

"Although the defendant is guilty of a malicious killing, his act cannot be classed as an atrocious murder planned and committed in cold blood, or one committed in the perpetration or commission of some grave felony," Judge Keller wrote in his opinion.

"Legat had undoubtedly suffered much provocation, annoyance and inconvenience over a period of years because of disputes over and interference with his water rights by the deceased. He has been an industrious citizen of Bucks county for a number of years, and heretofore he has, with the sole exception of his quarrels with the deceased, enjoyed a good reputation for peace and good order and as a law abiding citizen. He is not without the sympathy of this Court in the situation he now finds himself in, and we believe there are sufficient mitigating circumstances in this case to move the Court not to impose the extreme penalty, but that a sentence to imprisonment for life will sufficiently meet the end of justice under all the facts and circumstances involved in this case."

After deliberating an hour a jury in the Bucks county criminal court yesterday convicted Mrs. Anna Bellman, Perkaskie hair dresser on two counts on abortion, followed by death.

The woman's attorney, Harry Grim, of Perkaskie, immediately filed a motion for a new trial and Mrs. Bellman was released under bond pending disposition of the motion.

John McGovern, Bethlehem, was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter and his attorney made a motion for a new trial.

THE BIGGEST FISH I EVER CAUGHT

John S. Roberts, Jr., Caught His Biggest Fish When He Was 8 Years Old

WAS A SIX-FOOT SHARK

Was Envy of His Pals For Many Weeks After The Incident

"The Biggest Fish I Ever Caught."

That is the subject upon which a number of well-known fishermen have been interviewed by a Courier reporter. Contrary to the usual "fish" stories the sizes given in these interviews have been given accurately to the author of the story.

ARTICLE III.

At the tender age of eight years, John S. Roberts, Jr., Borough Engineer, made quite a name for himself as a fisherman, by hooking, and with assistance landing, a six-foot shark.

It is safe to say the youthful fisherman was for weeks after the event occurred, several years ago, the envy of his pals.

The big time occurred at Margate, N. J., known at that time as South Atlantic City. But let the borough engineer tell the story:

"My folks had a place at the resort, where we stayed each Summer. I did quite a bit of fishing from the wharf, and the day that the big catch took place I was using a regular shark line, consisting of sash cord, an iron hook and swivel measuring a foot in length, and baited with four or five eels.

"I was fishing in what was called the 'Thoroughfare,' back of Margate. I had rowed out into the middle of the stream" and left down the hook. Then returning to shore, I rigged the line up in the usual manner, hooking it over a bamboo pole, and leaving the end free except for attaching it to a buoy. This precaution was taken in case the shark that might bite should be too big to handle, and then the buoy would be thrown overboard. If this should be the case the buoy could be followed and the shark taken in tow after it was drowned.

"The bites usually occurred on the young flood tide, and that day I had three bites. The fish hooked itself on the third bite, and with help I commenced to haul in. There was soon a whole line of children of about my age, and also some women, pulling for all we were worth. We pulled the big fish in with little difficulty; but when we were ready to lift it from the water onto the wharf it turned and ran a distance. We pulled again and after five minutes had it on the platform. Then the real fun began. The shark commenced banging its big tail, and all of us were afraid to get very near. My older brother soon came running from the house with a shotgun, all the time trying to insert a shell which didn't fit the gun.

"Next came a neighbor, an old recluse, Lorenzo Bye, who was a great character in Margate, armed with an axe. One stroke of the axe in Mr. Bye's experienced hands, and the shark was done for."

Then reminiscing as thought of the friend in need came to him, Mr. Roberts continued: "Yes, Lorenzo Bye was my hero. He just lived the life of 'Riley,' and had some great tales of experience to tell. All of us boys admired him. His family came to Atlantic City when it was known as Reed's Beach. He owned much property, and had plenty of money, but that was the life he chose to live."

Then having recalled to mind the fishing experience, when questioned about the disposal of the shark, Mr. Roberts added: "Well, we pulled the teeth out, and dissected it. Finally we anchored the main part of the carcass in the Thoroughfare and used it to catch crabs. And it made good crab bait too."

"Did you keep any of the shark teeth for souvenirs?" the engineer was asked. "No. I'm sorry, I don't have any semblance of a souvenir of that big haul," he replied. But the memory of the big catch will always remain. Never in all his wide fishing experiences since has the Jefferson avenue resident been able to make a catch of such proportions.

WIRE NEWS SERVED BY GREAT I. N. S. CHAIN

Star Reporters All Over The World Send News Speedily To The Courier

A WORLD-WIDE SERVICE

When readers get their news from all over the world in their daily newspaper, they seldom visualize the world-wide reporting organization which supplies it. For instance, the Courier is served by the great International News Service, which sends out 100,000 words of news copy every day, gathered at an annual cost of approximately $4,000,000.

I. N. S. is the only world-wide press association devoted exclusively to service for afternoon newspapers, embracing in its clientele, more than 900 newspapers the world over and in its staff the ablest and finest corps of newspapermen ever gathered within one organization.

Thirty-five bureaus are maintained in the United States alone. Abroad there are staff representatives office in every foreign capital, each with a corps of assistants, all seasoned press association men, thoroughly trained in the foreign news field, who have won promotion overseas through exceptional work in the states.

Of the domestic bureaus, three are devoted exclusively to service for Pennsylvania newspapers, linked together by private leased wires which also are looped into the editorial offices of state client newspapers.

The state headquarters bureau is located at Pittsburgh with two leased wires routed from this office east and west to better serve the individual needs of clients in both sections. Feeding these sectional wires are two main news wires and a sports wire, routed from the New York headquarters division into Pittsburgh carrying all the national and international news of the day for transmission along with the state copy on the section show were announced today as follows:

ROBERT C. RUEHL

IS NAMED HEAD OF SCOUT CAMPAIGN

Well-Known Bristol Man Is Chosen To Direct Work For Section A

NAME GEORGE KNOLL

To Supervise Activities of Section B in the Coming Campaign

Robert C. Ruehl, Bristol, has accepted the Section A chairmanship of the Lower Bucks County District, to organize Bristol, Croydon, Edgely and Tullytown for the Boy Scout campaign for funds.

George Knoll will lead Section B of the same district for the communities of Andalusia, Cornwells, Newportville and Flushing.

Boy Scout Headquarters is busily getting out the material to the sectional chairmen throughout the county for the coming 1935 Maintenance Campaign of the Boy Scout Council. Every effort is being made by a corps of 24 sectional chairmen to have the local organizations ready to contact every individual during the eight days of October 6th to 14th. Churches have consented to permit Boy Scout speakers to inform their congregations of the objectives of Scouting. All lodges, fire companies, granges, farmers' clubs, chambers of commerce, and fraternal organizations are being asked to arrange for a speaker within their organization to familiarize their members with the ideals of scouting. Every service club in the county will have a member of the Bucks County Council Executive Board address them on the effort of the Boy Scout Council.

Scouting is the program for all boys of 9 to 18 years and through its appeal has entered hundreds of homes in Bucks County, giving the required leadership necessary to lead and guide the character of growing youth. In this day of increased leisure, Scouting attempts to build a series of Character Building situations through purposeful activities. With a consideration for the population, necessary services and resources of each of the sections, quotas are being developed, which will be fair amounts for each section to raise towards the necessary 1935 budget total of $7600.

The budget for next year must be larger than last year so that a secretary to take care of the necessary organization details will be available during the week at County Scout Headquarters, and make it possible for the Scout Executive to spend more time in field contacts.

The Council has been handicapped in its service to leaders through the lack of telephone service, which must be reestablished. Without the funds to continue a leaders' bulletin, issued bi-monthly, many excellent "kinks" on better leadership have not been available to the leaders. It is essential that such a medium of exchange be accessible on at least a bi-monthly basis.

After seven years of Scouting, and the acute condition of the present time, it is important that the best possible technical speakers be secured to speak at the training sessions of leaders conducted in two parts of the county each year. For the service within the county, whereby all boys from 9 to 18 will have Scouting accessible for them, it is necessary to go forward with the Six District Plan of Organization.

The Six District Plan will create a corps of volunteer Commissioners who will be responsible for and in charge of three to four Seascout Ships, Scout Troops, and Cub Packs.

The Foundation Committee, led by President Thomas Ross, is contacting those people who have been sponsors of the Boy Scout program for the past year, to urge the continuation of their interest. Too much credit cannot be given by County Boy Scout Commissioner William Burgess, Jr., of Morrisville, and Finance Chairman Edmund of Yardley in their work of organization and contacting the various Sections in the county to aid them in solving their financial problem, and creating a united effort towards the success of the Fall Campaign.

English Freighter Goes Aground In Delaware

The Montreal City, freighter of the Bristol City Line, from Fowey, England, went aground yesterday afternoon in the Delaware River a short distance below the Trenton Marine Terminal. Two of the boats of the Trenton Yacht Club went to the scene and pulled the large vessel back into the channel after a half hour's work.

The vessel in command of Captain H. D. White, left Trenton about 2:45 p. m. to go to Norfolk, Va., before leaving for a return trip to England. In some unknown manner the bow was forced out of the channel and became stuck. The Montreal City arrived in Trenton Monday with a cargo of 1,800 tons of china and ball clay for Trenton potteries.

It was erroneously stated in Tuesday's edition of the Courier, that Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson had purchased a new Hupmobile car.

DROWSY DRIVERS

One angle of the highway safety problem that seems to have escaped general attention is brought to the front by the Kansas corporation commission in taking steps to prevent the overworking of truck drivers.

An investigation made by the corporation commission disclosed that truck drivers frequently were overworked and that drowsiness was a factor in accidents in which they were involved.

There is no reason to believe that this situation is one peculiar to Kansas. The driving of trucks over highways filled with traffic of all kinds demands a high degree of skill if the hazardous element is to be reduced to a minimum. Large, heavily-laden trucks take up much more space than do passenger cars and many other vehicles and are much harder to maneuver. A clear brain and strong arms are required in order to avoid serious accidents. A man tired and drowsy after long hours of continuous driving is a hazard to safety behind the wheel of a truck.

The overworked truck driver may not be the greatest highway menace, but the problem he presents is one that can not be ignored in any comprehensive consideration of questions relating to public safety along the roads. It needs attention in all states which do not now have regulations dealing with the matter.

HIGHER PORK QUOTAS

The rapid rise in the price of hogs during the last few months naturally is hailed in the hog country. It will mean millions of dollars in extra money to the raisers of hogs on a commercial scale.

The advance was caused by the drought and the measures put into effect by the AAA to limit the hog "crop." At the time the reduction steps were taken, it was not known, of course, that nature would come along and take a hand in the matter and cut down the output far below the figures aimed at by the AAA.

Charles E. Snyder, a corn belt editor, sees the price advance as one of the most reliable signs that recovery is progressing. "To the business men and to the people generally," he comments, "the price of pork is the most vital trade index. Everybody ought to be glad to see $10 hogs. Hogs at that level, and kept there, afford the best possible promise of good times."

Mr. Snyder speaks largely from the viewpoint of the hog raiser. He ignores that class of consumer who has failed to receive a wage increase comparable with the rapid rise in the price of hogs. He also ignores the fact that the price of pork has taken place in the price of other commodities. There remains quite a number of these.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes three good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Remot a substitute. 25-cent drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

She was thinking about Wallace when she suddenly saw him coming toward her through the mist of snow. He had just closed the sliding door of the First National Bank, where he worked, and was coming down the steps. He saw her just as she caught sight of him and hurried across the sidewalk to her.

"Hello, Susan!" He grinned down at her through the thickening darkness and drew one of her arms through his. "This is certainly luck— for me! You'll let me drive you home, won't you?"

His grin made his face look almost boyish for a moment. At thirty Wallace already looked something of a personage, something of the dignified and solid captain of finance that he undoubtedly would be in ten or fifteen years. He was not tall and he was rather stout, but he carried himself so well that he looked tall. His features were regular and he had fine dark eyes.

His father and two of his uncles were directors of the bank, and Susan had decided early in her friendship with him that he and all the rest of the Steffen men were rather like the bank itself—square and solid and without romance.

"How's the boy banker?" she asked him as they started across the street with Wallace shortening his stride to get to step with her. He did not answer, and glancing up at him, she saw that he was peering down at her bare hand as it lay in the crook of his arm.

"No gloves, Susan, on a day like this!" His voice sounded as if he doubted the evidence of his eyes.

But Susan knew that he was not surprised in the least. He had never worn gloves if she could avoid it, and she had explained to him dozens of times that she disliked them because they gave her hands a dry tight feeling as if an extra skin had been added to them. She never wore overshoes, either, and she laughed at his galoshes, his muffs, his fur-lined driving gloves and the foot-warmer on the floor of his automobile.

"Just because you coddle yourself, Wallace, you think I ought to." She fished in her pocket for her gloves as she spoke. "However, I'll put these on if it will make you feel any better."

"It will. You look just like the poor little match girl with your hands bare." He took a tighter hold of her arm as they stepped down into the homeward marching throng of people on the Fifth Street crossing. Holding her close to his side he drew her around the corner to the garage where he kept his car during the day. It stood just inside the door, a shining black coupe with a Scotch plaid robe folded neatly on the seat and the foot warmer on the floor.

"I suppose you loathe this robe, too," Wallace said good-naturedly, throwing it across her knees and tucking it in well at the sides. "But you've got to have it. I'm going to take care of you whether you want me to or not, young lady."

He had been saying a great many little things like that lately, Susan reflected as he lit a cigarette. Throwing out little hints that he had a feeling of tenderness and protectiveness for her.

GIRL IN THE FAMILY

BY BEATRICE BURTON

SYNOPSIS

Susan Broderick and her aunt, Lottie, who had seen more prosperous times, ordered a pillow at Hart's department store where the family had a charge account for years. They are summoned to the office of the manager, Mr. Dillon, who informs them the account has been discontinued as it had not been paid for five months.

CHAPTER II

Susan's face was as scarlet as Lottie's and she never knew just how the two of them got out of the office. As its door closed after them she heard Mr. Dillon say again that he was very sorry in a voice that sounded far away like a voice in a nightmare. Then they were in the elevator once more, packed in with other women whose clothes looked glossy and new even if they were not made of mink as Lottie's coat was. She glanced down at her own coat of black Russian caucail that looked rusty and "ratty" after four winters.

"We're shabby-genteel, Lottie and I," she told herself as they got out of the elevator at the first floor. A full length mirror, fastened to a pillar opposite the elevators, caught their reflection—the reflection of two women who were plainly "ladies" but who were also plainly down on their luck in out-of-date hats that turned up in front instead of down in a season when all the new hats had the right eye, in last-season skirts that were too short, in black, thin suede shoes that were shiny at heel and toe from too much wearing.

"Let's go out at the side door. I simply cannot pass that saleswoman at the lace counter," Lottie said in a whisper, as if she were afraid that someone in the throng of shoppers might hear of their humiliation. Her eyebrows were twisted high on her forehead in a look of dismay and bewilderment still. "That upstart of a man, Susan! I can't understand why I stood there and let him talk to us the way he did. Just think of his daring to—Why old Crowell Hart, who founded this store, was one of your Grandfather Broderick's life-long friends—I wish I'd put that fellow into his place!"

Susan shook her blond head. "Nothing that you could have said would have made any difference, Lottie," she said. "All that mattered to him was that our bill wasn't paid. His job is to tell people just what he told us—that if they don't pay they can't buy anything in the store."

They were walking away from the building now, moving very quickly as if both of them felt that they were in full flight from something shameful.

"I don't believe I feel equal to walking home, Susan," Lottie said as they reached the corner of South Main and Sixth Street. "I think I'll get on a street car here. I feel so—helpless. As if someone had knocked me down and walked over me." Her voice was shaking, and suddenly to Susan's horror she began to cry. She pushed up her spotted veil and began to brush away the tears that gathered along her lids and rolled down her face.

"Nothing like that ever happened to me before," she went on after a minute or two. "But then we always had plenty of money until the last two or three years, and money protects you from lots of unpleasant things. I used to be miserable because everybody I knew was married and I wasn't. I used to think I'd marry even a poor man if I had the chance—but I wouldn't think of doing it now that I'm older and wiser. I know now that nothing in this world really matters except money."

"Susan, I'll never be the same again after what just happened to us. I declare, I feel just like a criminal. Don't you?"

"Certainly not, and you mustn't," Susan answered sturdily as Lottie's street car came along. "Let's forget it. I think I'll walk, Lottie. Goodbye."

She helped her aunt into the car and stood on the edge of the pavement, frowning as she watched it disappear into the snow-filled darkness. Then as she turned and started along South Main Street past the lighted store windows her face began to clear. She swung along smoothly and quickly as if she enjoyed walking, and her lips parted a little as if she drank in the cold fresh air with eagerness.

Under the brim of the unfashionable hat her whole face wore an eager expectant look as if she were on her way to meet someone whom she was very impatient to see. As a matter of fact she didn't know more than a hundred people in the whole city, but whenever she was out on the streets alone she found herself filled with an oddly excited expectant feeling... a feeling that just around the next corner, in the next block, someone or something wonderful and thrilling might be waiting for her.

So far, in her twenty-one years, very little that was out of the ordinary had happened to her. One day of her life was so much like the next one that she could hardly tell them apart, and all of them so uneventful that a walk downtown and back was something of an adventure to her.

The crowded streets were as fascinating to her as the scenes of a play, and this was true of the time of day when she liked them best. The office buildings lighting up, the electric signs flashing out, the arc lights glowing above the sidewalks like cold white moons, the sound of traffic that was like the roll of drums.

But what always drew her attention more than anything else was the army of girls who came pouring into the streets from the stores and offices where they had been at work all day. They struck her as being so much more free and alive and self-reliant than the older people in the crowd, and ever since she had left high school she had longed to be one of them. They were doing interesting work, earning money, going places, meeting people, every day in the week. If they wanted to stay downtown for dinner and a concert they could do it without asking anyone for the money. If they wanted the latest look or the newest hat, they could earn the money for it with their own hands and heads. Compared with her own existence there lives seemed filled with color and interest.

"There's nothing like having your own work and your own money," she told herself now, and as she watched three of them flash past her, arms linked, a feeling of strong determination to get out into life, do something, earn money, be alive and meet other people who were alive and young, swept over her.

She had known that feeling a great many times before, but so far it had never got her anywhere. When she left high school at eighteen she had made a secret for a college education—the only kind of fight that she knew how to make. John, her brother, was going to law school, and she had told her father that she wanted to be trained to earn her living, too.

"No, I don't believe in higher education for women," her father had told her. "You'll never have to earn your own living. You'll get married and let some man look after you. What you want to do is to stay at home and learn how to run a house."

A little later Susan begged him to let her take a course at business school that would fit her for an office position, a career of her own. A life of her own, not simply a flat existence at home, broken here and there by trips to the store or the library, by afternoon calls and evenings at the movies, by the visits of Wallace Steffen, who came to see her three nights a week—usually on Tuesdays and Fridays and Sundays. She had tried to make him understand that life in the Brodericks' old brick house was not enough for her. She wanted something real to do, wanted to try her own wings.

But whenever she talked "job" to him he came back at her with a great deal of talk about Wallace Steffen. She would marry Wallace in all probability. And, he asked her, what use would Wallace's wife have for a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting?

She was thinking about Wallace when she suddenly saw him coming toward her through the mist of snow. He had just closed the sliding door of the First National Bank, where he worked, and was coming down the steps. He saw her just as she caught sight of him and hurried across the sidewalk to her.

"Hello, Susan!" He grinned down at her through the thickening darkness and drew one of her arms through his. "This is certainly luck— for me! You'll let me drive you home, won't you?"

His grin made his face look almost boyish for a moment. At thirty Wallace already looked something of a personage, something of the dignified and solid captain of finance that he undoubtedly would be in ten or fifteen years. In his two terms in the Senate, Senator Reed has left an indelible impress on public affairs. There stands to his credit in whole or in part, the basic laws of the Nation, dealing with immigration, tariff, and taxation, world war veterans, and the military establishment.

AS HIS DEMOCRATIC COLLEAGUES SEE HIM

"There is in this body, no abler lawyer, no more resourceful debater than the Senator from Pennsylvania."—Senator Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, January 26, 1934.

"I cannot allow the occasion to pass without paying tribute to the conscientious and able and patriotic service on the Finance Committee of Senator Reed. I have found no Senator more industrious, more conscientious, and more courageous in his devotion to public service and more capable of arguing his studied convictions than the able Senator from Pennsylvania. His record as a painstaking, diligent, and able Senator speaks for itself."—Senator David I. Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, June 15, 1932.

"He knows the ex-service men and their condition as well as any other Senator does, if not better."—U. S. Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona, May 28, 1926.

WHOM WILL YOU CHOOSE FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR?

Joseph S. Guffey, whose only achievement in public life has been the distinction to be the Democratic boss in Pennsylvania,

or
David A. Reed, a distinguished Pennsylvania lawyer with an honorable war record, an able and experienced Senator with ability and broad vision everywhere acknowledged. A forceful speaker, no backslapper, neither trickster or quack, but straightforward, serious, sincere, courageous, with love of liberty and a willingness to work.

FOR GOVERNOR OF PENNSYLVANIA

GEORGE H. EARLE, 3rd

The Democratic candidate was born in Devon, Pa., 1890. Received early education in the DeLancey School, Philadelphia, and later graduated from Harvard. After leaving college he spent two years abroad. The Democratic gubernatorial nominee springs from a long line of Republicans, and was himself a Republican until shortly before the May Primary when he changed his party enrollment to Democrat and the Guffey-controlled State Committee endorsed him for Governor. Supported Roosevelt for President and was a heavy contributor to the Democratic campaign funds. Minister to Austria for a few months, by appointment of President Roosevelt, but quickly resigned to become hand-picked candidate for Governor. Director, Horn and Hardart Baking Company, and director Tradesman National Bank and Trust Company. Beneficiary of a trust created by his millionaire father.

ACHIEVEMENTS AND QUALIFICATIONS FOR OFFICE

A polo player of recognized merit; once captain of the All-Philadelphia Polo team; and has wielded his mallet to good advantage in championship polo games.

The Third Earle of Haverford has the unique distinction of being the first bustard hunter to become a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. The bustard which Earle enjoys hunting with his blunder-buss on the open plains of Austria, is an imposing bird running in small flocks and nature, as a means of protection has given them the instinct of designating one of their flock as sentinel, while the others feed. The bustards have discovered the peasants seldom carry fire arms; accordingly they show no fear of the farmer and field workers and there is where intelligent hunters such as Earle, by taking advantage of the gullibility of the bustard, manage to land one for the family table. The bustard blasters don Hungarian peasant attire and walk stealthily through a field, pretending the rifle is a rake. This fools the sentinel of the flock of bustards and the hunter eventually gets close enough for a shot, and one more bustard bites the dust.

Stalking the bustard and playing polo are not all the activities holding a strong attachment for Earle. As a dog fancier he is known throughout the country and his dogs have been exhibited in the leading dog shows.

WILLIAM A. SCHNADER

The Republican candidate was born in Lancaster County, Pa., 1886. Worked his way through college and has always supported himself. Graduated from Franklin-Marshall College in 1908, and from the Pennsylvania Law School in 1912. Practiced law in Philadelphia for ten years before receiving his first appointment to the Attorney General's office.

ACHIEVEMENTS AND QUALIFICATIONS FOR OFFICE

Mr. Schnader came to Harrisburg at the beginning of the first Pinchot administration in 1923 to serve as Special Deputy Attorney General. Four years later Governor Fisher invited him to remain as Chief Deputy to Attorney General Baldrige and subsequently placed in full command of the office and re-appointed Attorney General when Governor Pinchot succeeded Fisher. These eleven years on Capitol Hill have served to give him an inexhaustible store of knowledge with regard to the operations of the State Government. He drafted the Administrative Code which completely reorganized the Government of the State and drew up all budget measures. During the 1925, 1926, 1927 and 1929 sessions of the Legislature, Schnader drafted virtually all important legislation sponsored by either the Pinchot or Fisher administrations, including the fiscal code which created the Department of Revenue. He has represented the Commonwealth in all important legislation, and one of his notable victories came in the Dorrance Inheritance Tax case which went to the Supreme Court of the United States and Schnader's argument was upheld by the highest tribunal of the land. As Attorney General he deals with all State departments and he is intimately familiar with the duties and functions of each.

Whom Will You Choose for Governor?

George H. Earle, 3rd, the Democratic candidate who has occupied his time in galloping around on a polo pony, chasing bustards and showing off his prize pooches

or
William A. Schnader, the Republican candidate, who has had eleven years schooling for the office, the legal adviser of two Governors; the drafter of laws covering entire State Government, as well as many other important public measures with a record in office of liberalism and of getting things done.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness. If kidneys don't empty 2 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. ## Wrie News Served By Great I. N. S. Chain

State capital news is relayed on the Pennsylvania wires by the Harrisburg bureau and in addition to thorough comprehensive capital coverage, particular attention is given to the special legislative news requirements of every state client. News coverage of the important eastern section of the state is controlled by the Philadelphia bureau.

Augmenting the staff personnel of these three bureaus, a corps of correspondents numbering into the hundreds, spreading into every city and town in Pennsylvania, is constantly alert for any news that may develop, which is filed instantly, either by telephone or wire into the nearest state office of I. N. S. from whence it is relayed on the leased wire into client editorial rooms.

Accuracy and speed are the only editorial policies of I. N. S. The news is told as it develops—colorful, factual and unbiased. Accuracy, above all, is stressed at all times. "GET IT FIRST BUT FIRST GET IT RIGHT" is the organization slogan guiding every I. N. S. reporter.

In Pennsylvania, I. N. S. has exerted every effort to build the finest state service possible for afternoon newspapers. Emphasis is given to sectional copy, and in addition to the general news report, special service is rendered whenever possible on any story of particular value to individual clients.

A group of seasoned press association correspondents headed by William J. Kelly, Pennsylvania state manager, has an excellent knowledge of the needs and problems of all Pennsylvania editors.

Kelly, a graduate of the Columbia University school of journalism, has seen action in all three of the Pennsylvania bureaus and was formerly manager at Harrisburg. Previous to his appointment as Central Pennsylvania manager he acted as capital hill and legislative correspondent. He has also served in the New York and Columbus bureaus.

Among the star writers who make the I. N. S. report outstanding in the afternoon newspaper field are George R. Holmes, Chief of the I. N. S. Washington staff, and one of the foremost political writers in the nation today; Hubert R. Knickerbocker, Pulitzer Prize journalist and rising European correspondent for I. N. S.; whose recent stories from Berlin and Vienna have won international acclaim; Arno Dosch-Pleurat, one of the best known of World War correspondents; James L. Kilgallen and David P. Sontner, ace writers of the

New York staff whose bylines on the more important stories are known to newspaper readers everywhere; Hudson Hawley in London and Tom Wilhelm in Berlin.

Due to its unsurpassed reportorial talent, the I. N. S. daily news report is most outstanding, sparkling in its presentation of the news, and distinguished for its accuracy, colorful writing, exclusive features and wealth of human interest copy.

PENNSYLVANIA NEEDS MORE CONCRETE ROADS

EVERYBODY'S thrilled—when the pleasing ribbon of light gray concrete swings into view.

The nervous tension, generated by ordinary roads, disappears. Conversation resumes. Everybody feels better on the true and even surface of concrete.

The car leaps ahead faster... smoother... safer. Tires sing. The steering wheel feels firm, free from road shocks. Motoring zest is quickly regained.

Concrete roads are safer... you're less apt to skid. You'll stop more quickly, more surely. There's less chance of blow-outs. Light, clean-cut edges make visibility much better at night. Your car operates more economically.

Route your course over concrete. Stay on it. Insist on it.

GLORIA HANOVER HANGS UP MARK

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 27.—A new track record for three-year-olds was established on the half-mile oval here yesterday.

The record was hung up by Anthony Schurman's Trenton, N. J., pacer, Gloria Hanover, by Guy McKinney, with Ned Carr driving her a mile in the second heat in the last time of 2:08 3/4.

Nine side-wheelers received the word from starting Judge Gill Wetmore, of Vernon, N. Y., in the feature 2:24 pace, and the popular Trenton mare, trained on the Doylestown track as a two-year-old, captured all three heats, with Peter Napoleon, from the Eckert Stables in Reading, a contender in the opening mile, and Miss Meadows, a Plainfield, N. J., mare from the stables of John Manzidano, the runner-up in the last two heats. The first mile of this event was clocked in 2:09.

PANTS FOR PANTS

SEATTLE, Wash. (INS) — It may have been funny to them, but it was no joke to Robert Ombey, 16, when three men he charged for a ride took off his trousers, containing $1.24 and a cheap watch, and then made him walk two miles to his home panting and pantless. So when the three men pleaded that it was just a practical joke, after being arrested on disorderly conduct charges, Judge William Bell sentenced them to 90 days each.

THREE BRISTOL BOYS TO PLAY WITH TACONY

Three Bristol boys have signed to play football with the Tacony Aces. The Aces have merged with the Overbrook White Jackets and the result should prove that the Tacony club will have one of the best road teams (with the exception of the National League) that represents the Quaker City. The localities are: "Gige" Dougherty, "Pete" Choma, and "Gunner" Corrigan. Before the week is over Manager Joe Melman is expected to add two more Bristolians to the list.

The first game for the Aces is for this Sunday, and the Northeast Trojans, formerly the Frankford Trojans, will be the opponents. The game will be played on the Trojans' field, Frankford avenue and Conly streets. Also on the Aces' schedule are the following clubs: Rochester, Stapleton, Bridgeport and Pennsgrove.

Russell Kurth, formerly of the Frankford Yellowjackets, is coach of the Aces, while his assistant is Lou Evans. Joe Melman is handling the schedule.

STRIKE VIOLENCE

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Two deaths, one a woman passenger, struck by a steel ball bearing, today marked a fresh wave of violence in the strike of Chicago's motor coach company bus drivers.

The dead: Mrs. Mary Kennard, 65, bus passenger; James Kelly, bus company dispatcher.

The death of Mrs. Kennard, first fatality in the six weeks' old strike, came after a day of bloody violence. Two men were shot, one passenger suffered injury in a bomb explosion, and another was struck by a brick thrown through a bus window.

LEGAL BATTLE OVER N. R. A.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—A long and bitter legislative battle over continuation of the NRA was forecast today. The resignation of Hugh S. Johnson as recovery administrator, cast a cloud of uncertainty over the entire situation.

"Much depends upon what happens between now and January," said Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, who with Senator Borah, Republican of Idaho, opened the fight on Johnson's administration in the last Congress.

"Perhaps the question will not even be before Congress for consideration. If it is, the place of the independent business man will receive much consideration."

The American Federation of Labor, through its executive council, already has warned candidates for the Senate and House that they will be expected to favor continuance of the NRA, while some of the leading figures in "big business" are mapping a battle against the present plan.

PINCHOT LIKELY TO SUPPORT TICKET

Harrisburg, Sept. 27.—Further substantiation of the now generally accepted belief that Governor Gifford Pinchot will turn in for the Republican ticket this Fall came today from the man who defeated him in the Primaries—Senator David A. Reed.

Acceptance of the Governor's changed attitude, expected to be announced by him shortly, to end his political feud of years, with the G. O. P. organization, was read into the senior Senator's announcement of his intention to visit the Governor next week.

"There is no personal bitterness between Governor Pinchot and myself," Senator Reed said. "I fought him as hard as I could, and the Governor did not pull his punches on me."

The Governor was expected to return to Harrisburg early next week. He is at present vacationing off Rhode Island.

Diana FISHWICK -- FORMER BRITISH GOLF QUEEN -- SHE BEAT MISS ORCUTT IN THE LAST CUP MATCHES

THE BRITISH GIRLS WILL GO AFTER THE U.S. TITLE OCT. 1ST

CONTINUING the friendly sports rivalry between Uncle Sam and John Bull, another Anglo-American competition gets under way tomorrow when a picked team of British women golfers clash with a select line-up of American links ladies at the Chevy Chase Club in Washington, with the Curtis Cup at stake.

The British team, which will challenge for the trophy now held by the Americans, is composed of eight of John Bull's best woman golfers, with Doris Chambers heading the team as captain and manager.

Notable among the British golfing gals are Diana Fishwick, former British champion; Molly Gourlay, an experienced and capable veteran; Wanda Morgan, long hitting star who played in the last international, and Diana Plumpton, a finalist in the 1933 British championship.

Miss Fishwick and Miss Gourlay are both well known to American golfers, the former having competed in the Florida tournaments during the past few years. Miss Fishwick accounted for one of the few British victories in the first international series, defeating Miss Maureen Orcutt, but her success in playing over American courses has been rather limited.

On the American side, such outstanding stars as Virginia Van Wie, national champion; Maureen Orcutt, Mrs. O. S. Hill and Mrs. L. D. Cheney are expected to show their accustomed brilliance against the invaders. Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare is the acting captain of the U. S. team, but at this writing it is not believed that she will play.

The British girls will remain for the U. S. nationals next week and are expected to be serious threats to Miss Van Wie's supremacy.
